Commander's Letter

July is the month we celebrate our nation's birthday. As America turns 234 years old this year, let's all remember what the Declaration of Independence meant to our founding fathers and the sacrifices they made to win liberty for generations to come. We're going to help you celebrate America's birthday this year with the "Worth Fighting For?" Independence Day Weekend Celebration, July 2 to July 5. Bring the kids out to enjoy four days of carnival rides, good food and live entertainment.

There will be other 4th of July celebrations in the tri-state area, including Thunder on the Ridge in Haines City, Fla. and Celebrate America at the Reed Bingham State Park near Adel, Ga. The Florida celebration includes arts and crafts and kids' activities. Boat rides, animal programs and watermelon eating contests await you at Reed Bingham. If you like water sports, take the short drive up to Beaufort, S.C. for the Beaufort Water Fest, July 10 to July 19. Watch the raft races and water shows or visit a low-country estuary. You can even take a cruise on a Coast Guard cutter. While you're there, don't forget to try some of the local seafood.

If you didn't get your fill of fireworks on the 4th, drive over to Lincolnton, Ga. and Elijah Clark State Park for Thunder Over Thurman, July 11. Bring lawn chairs or blankets and enjoy a picnic or swimming before the fireworks show, which begins after dark. Try to be home on Sunday though, for you don't want to miss the American Favorites Sunday Brunch planned for July 12 at Club Stewart and Hunter Club. All the comfort foods Americans love are on the menu - fried chicken, mini-cheeseburgers, BBQ riblets, roast beef, potato salad and mac & cheese. They'll even have apple pie and ice cream sundaes, and it's all for a very reasonable price.

Take a trip up to Myrtle Beach, S.C., July 11 then go for a Market Common Art Walk. Browse through the array of artwork done by local artists or just spend the day shopping and dining in this, quaint, village-like community.

While you're thinking of beaches though, consider what nearby Tybee Island has to offer single Soldiers and Families. There's a lot more to this historic island than sandy beaches. Find out for yourself but first read this month's feature article in your Quality Time.

Art and food go well together with a walking tour of downtown Charleston. You can sample the artwork of 13 art galleries and the cuisine of 13 fine restaurants during a Palette and Palate Stroll, July 17. Charleston is a beautiful old city, rich in history with something for everyone. On July 18, come to Savannah's Roundhouse Railroad Museum and see Flags Around the World. Let the kids learn about the flags and cultures of other countries or even the country of their Family heritage. Then let them take part in a workshop that teaches them how to make the flags of other nations.

July is a long month, which gives Soldiers and their Families more time together. The folks at FMWR have planned lots of fun activities for both single Soldiers and Families, but there are also many more things for everyone to do in the tri-state area. Check out this month's Quality Time to see what events and activities to look for. Get out of the barracks and off that couch. Spend some quality time with your loved ones and have a great summer, but drive carefully. Have fun and be safe!

Tybee Island:

More than just a beautiful beach

Randy Murray
Managing Editor

Georgia's most northeastern barrier island is more than a beautiful, white-sand beach. Tybee Island has 400 years of history on display in its museum, but, like the museum itself, much of the island's history is its famous landmarks. The museum is located in part of old Fort Screven's Battery Garland, a gun battery and magazine for a 12-inch gun, built in 1899.

Used by the U.S. Army until 1947, the fort was named after local Revolutionary War hero Brig. Gen. James Screven. One of Fort Screven's former commanders was then Col. George C. Marshall, who as Army Chief of Staff authored the Marshall Plan for re-constructing Europe after World War II.

Behind Battery Garland is Tybee Island Light Station, first built in 1736. Although it has been rebuilt several times, Tybee Lighthouse has been guiding mariners into Savannah River for nearly 270 years, from as far as 18 miles out to sea. Admission to the lighthouse and museum is included in one ticket price, which, for military ID card holders is $5.

Another famous landmark connected with Tybee Island is Cockspur Lighthouse, located on an islet in the Intracoastal Waterway between Tybee Island and Fort Pulaski. Only accessible by boat, this little lighthouse doesn't see a lot of visitors, but those who care to visit are welcomed to come ashore the shell-covered islet, walk up the no-guardrail, outside steps and take the narrow stairwell up to a leaning ladder that takes you to the lookout loft.

Be sure to wear shoes, real shoes not flip-flops, because oyster shells will cut your feet. Please leave the spiders as you found them, and try not to disturb the dust as this is part of the lighthouse décor.

Fort Pulaski is an early 19th masonry fort named for Polish nobleman and American Revolutionary War hero Count Casimir Pulaski. West Point engineering graduate, then Lt. Robert E. Lee, helped plan and prepare the construction of the fort in the 1830's.

The fort is most remembered for a Civil War battle that marked a turning point in military history. Union troops on Tybee Island used new, rifled cannons to accurately breach the 32-foot high, 7 to 11-foot thick walls of the Confederate fort from a distance of over a mile away.

On April 11, 1862, 30 hours after the Union shelling began, the shattered fort surrendered. The use of rifled cannons made masonry forts obsolete.

Although you don't get to experience the excitement of a Union artillery bombardment, you can visit Fort Pulaski today for $3. The fort is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Take advantage of the nature trails while you're there.

Another attraction you may want to visit is the Marine Science Center. Their aquariums and exhibits show off the fish, reptiles, invertebrates, corals and other sea critters that make their home on or near Tybee Island. Call 912-786-5917 for more information about the Marine Science Center.

Now you can hit the beach. Go to the north end of the island near the lighthouse and find plenty of paid parking at the museum. Or, head down to the south end of the island and find parking near the Tybee Island Pier and Pavilion.

The pier was first built more than a century ago but burned down years later. It was rebuilt in 1996. Today the Pier and Pavilion are the Tybee Island's most visited attraction.

Walk down the pier and inhale the fresh ocean air, take in the breathtaking ocean views, or try fishing from the pier. The Pier and Pavilion often hosts street dances, live music and other special events on the beach. You can pay homage to several gift shops, restaurants and motels, all within walking distance.

Be sure to try the seafood while you're on the island, especially the Wild Georgia

Shrimp. The crab soup and homemade key lime pie at MacElwee's Seafood House are worth the trip to Tybee, even if it's a cold rainy day, unfit for fishing or beachcombing. Other local restaurants have their own delicious seafood dishes waiting for you to enjoy.

Chances are that thousands of Soldiers, Family Members and Army Civilians from Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield will plan a day or weekend trip to Tybee Island this summer, and that's a good thing. But when you take your Family, please don't pass up the historic landmarks - the lighthouses, forts, museums and restaurants on your way to the beach.

There's so much more to Tybee Island than its beautiful, white sandy beach. Instead of spending your visit basting in the sun or splashing in the surf, take some time to experience all that the island has to offer.
